Friday Menu

Friday 19th May 1769

Made the journey

Guinness first exported to the UK

A regular pour to every pub in the land, 'The Black Stuff' was originally exported to the UK on this day. The time-honoured blend of water, partially roasted barley, roast malt extract, hops, and brewer's yeast, this pride of St. James's Gate Brewery has been known to have healthy benefits for its drinkers (although these claims are staunchly denied by representatives of the company). We like to think a drop of 'The Black Stuff' is a good idea most evenings, so it's fair to say when the first ships pulled in carrying the creamy-topped cargo, a sizeable selection of the barrels may have been cracked open in celebration.

Made us hold our breath

Who shot JR?

Dallas became staple viewing for any family in the eighties, the non-stop family drama of Texan oil magnates the Ewings. The centre of this global cliffhanger was the shooting of its resident villain, J.R., played by Larry Hagman. The world waited on the edge of its seat to find out who pulled the trigger – was it his long-suffering wife, Sue Ellen? Her lover, Dusty Farlow – the bookies favourite? Or his childhood rival Cliff Barnes? ... it turned out to be none other than Sue Ellen's sister Kristin.

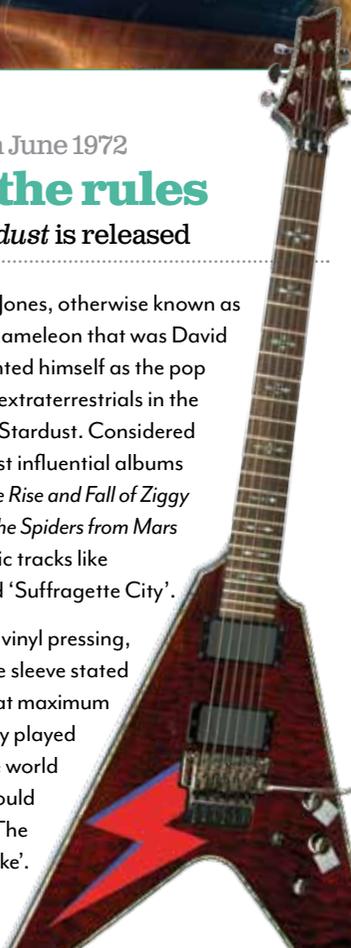

Friday 16th June 1972

Made the rules

Ziggy Stardust is released

David Robert Jones, otherwise known as the musical chameleon that was David Bowie, reinvented himself as the pop messenger to extraterrestrials in the form of Ziggy Stardust. Considered one of the most influential albums of all time, The Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust and The Spiders from Mars featured classic tracks like 'Starman' and 'Suffragette City'.

In the original vinyl pressing, the back of the sleeve stated 'To be played at maximum volume'. Ziggy played guitar and the world loved it. He would reappear as 'The Thin White Duke'. True genius.

Friday 1st July 1977

Made history

Virginia Wade wins Wimbledon

In straight sets against Betty Stöve from The Netherlands, Virginia Wade took the title of Ladies' Champion in the year of the Queen's Silver Jubilee. Surprisingly no stranger to victory, Wade had previously secured the US and Australian Opens. But Wimbledon had always eluded her. On this day, the Centre Court echoed with the sound of 'Land of Hope and Glory'.

Made food fast

McDonald's first franchise

The brainchild of Maurice and Richard McDonald achieved its first franchise when Ray Kroc, a humble milkshake salesman from Des Plaines, Chicago, decided he wanted a slice of this culinary revolution. So was the franchise born. So successful was the operation that in 1961 the insightful Mr Kroc bought out the brothers and introduced Ronald McDonald and the Golden Arches.

Saturday Menu

Saturday 4th August 2012

Made of gold

Super Saturday at 2012 London Olympics

It was the culmination of decades of hopes, dreams and intense commitment from our British hopefuls. It was the icing on an Olympic cake that was already sweet. Showcasing the UK in all its glory, we approached 'Super Saturday' in a good place on the medal table. Little did we realise the almighty haul that would follow. It started with Jessica Ennis in the heptathlon, then Mo Farah in the 10,000m. Only a few minutes later, Greg Rutherford shocked the stadium by taking the long jump title. Earlier that day, our rowing heroes had taken a further two golds and the exceptional track cycling team had scooped a further triumph in the team pursuit. Team GB would never be the same again.

Last-minute wonder goal against Greece

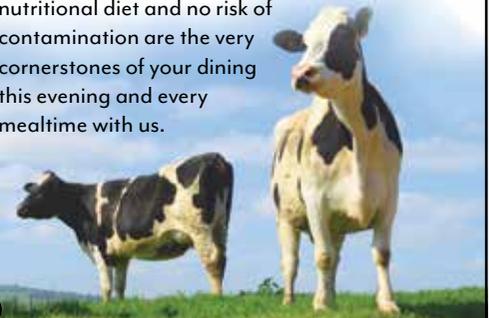

We struggle to this day to know how 'Golden Balls' achieved it. But time and time again, Mr Beckham wowed a nation with his physics-defying free kicks. Defensive walls from top international teams could only watch in disbelief as the ball went sailing around them and past the reach of their helpless keeper.

Bucks Fizz win Eurovision

We already had a strong reputation heading into the 1981 Eurovision Song Contest. Sandie, Lulu and The Brotherhood of Man had already claimed victory. So in this year a group of popsters was formed to make it number 4. Making your Mind Up was a resounding hit, sparking a musical career that still survives today in various forms. However, it's that 'skirt rip' that will live forever in Eurovision history.

Saturday 21st September 1937

Made it precious

The Hobbit first published

J.R.R. Tolkien's epic tale of a humble hobbit and his journey across Middle Earth helped to create a genre that is loved by all to this day. It was published prior to the Second World War and was later responsible for Tolkien being heralded as the Father of Modern Fantasy Literature. In the book, also titled There and Back Again, and Tolkien's subsequent novels within his fantasy world, we read excitedly about hobbits, elves and dwarves confronting orcs and ogres in the Battle of the Five Armies. The books lean heavily on his First World War experiences, his intense passion for Norse mythology and all things William Morris.

Dolly Rebecca Parton Dean is born

The diminutive country and western powerhouse was the original songwriter of the Whitney Houston classic I Will Always Love You, but this was only one of many amazing hits the philanthropist and big-hearted country gal was responsible for. Hooray for Dollywood!

Sunday 1st July 1979

Made music personal

Sony Walkman introduced

Created out of the need for the Sony founder to listen to opera on long haul-flights, the Walkman gave us the freedom to listen to our favourite cassettes on the move. It seems light years away from the instant access to the world of music via the internet streaming services of today. In its day it gave the millions of joggers and moody teenagers an immediate escape into the music they loved. It truly allowed a generation to tune in, turn on and drop out, if only for the duration of Abba's Greatest Hits.

Sunday 10th April 1633

Bananas go on sale in Britain

Now a part of everyday dining, it's hard to imagine life before the trusty banana. However, it wasn't until 1633 that this strange tropical fruit first went on sale in Britain. Brought from Bermuda by renowned botanist and herbalist Thomas Johnson. Without this discovery, countless comedy falls from escaping felons could have been avoided. (Please dispose of your banana skin responsibly, folks.)

Sunday 11th February 1990

Made us free once more

Nelson Mandela is released

After 27 years of imprisonment, the human rights campaigner negotiated an end to apartheid in South Africa. He later went on to be the nation's President from 1994 till 1999. Cited alongside Mahatma Gandhi and Martin Luther King as a universal symbol of social justice, and deservedly was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in Oslo in 1993.

Sunday 15th April 1984

Tommy Cooper dies on stage

Classic funnyman Tommy Cooper died on this day on TV during Live from Her Majesty's. A consummate professional and master of the unexpected, the red tarboosh wearing maestro collapsed on stage to the laughs of his adoring fans, completely oblivious to the reality he was literally dying on stage. A legend to the last.

Sunday 14th September 1958

Made you do well

Bruce Forsyth's first appearance - Sunday Night at the London Palladium

The man, the myth, the legend - Sir Bruce Forsyth CBE made his first but career-breaking appearance on Sunday Night at the London Palladium. Child performer 'The Boy Bruce, The Mighty Atom' first trod the boards at the ripe old age of 14 and was still the lithe and sprightly charmer of audiences 75 years later. Entertainment genius we may never see the likes of ever again.

Elvis' last performance

The final performance from 'The King' happened at The Market Square Arena on this day in front of 18,000 of his adoring fans. He was in fine spirits, in a jovial yet reflective mood. An incredibly charismatic and powerful vocalist, there can be only one Elvis Aron Presley.
